Dear Sol,

Here are the transcripts. S&S liked the book very much but decided again risking antagonizing the govt because their problems with "Calories Dont Count". But they offered to have it read elsewhere and this is being done. The man who buys "pocketbooks" for reprint called Doubleday, gave the book a very high personal endorsement and got a promise it would be read in a week and by the man who is Eisenhower's and Nixon's editor. I regret the unending delays but was both pleased and impressed with this courtesy. This man is also interested in me and the things I'm working on. I left him several brief summaries, which he had earlier requested, and I'm to see him about them early next week. If Doubleday doesn't want to do the book he is next sending it to Morrow, where he also has a good connection, both personal and business. I could never get an agent with better connections and able to get more speed (six weeks reading time is considered good). So, briefly, that's it for the moment. I'll be in New York again possibly Sunday night, maybe Monday a.m. and will call you. Regards.

Harold
